William J. (Three Fingered Jack) White, notorious police character and once under a life imprisonment sentence for the murder of a policeman, thought he was a free man yesterday as he stepped from the front door of the new county jail, after more than three years' imprisonment. However, he did not reckon with Capt. William Schoemaker of the detective bureau, who was on hand to greet him.

"Well, well! Look who's out!" said the captain. "I thought we had locked you up and thrown away the key, but it seems that we were mistaken. I'll just cart you down to our jail, where I think we have some old warrants for you."

White protested vigorously, but his protests availed him nothing when it was found that he was wanted on a warrant for the McHenry State bank robbery in 1925.

Health Department Orders 135 Families Vaccinated

Vaccination for 135 families living in the vicinity of North Crawford and Peterson avenues was ordered yesterday by the health department after it was discovered that they had been obtaining their milk supply from a driver who was in an advanced stage of smallpox. The driver, Edmund Talby, 3218 North Cicero avenue, who had never been vaccinated, was taken to the Isolation hospital after his illness had been diagnosed as smallpox.

QUARRELS WITH HIS WIFE, FOUND DEAD IN ROOM

Palm Beach, Fla., April 2.—(AP)—Withholding a verdict until it receives an autopsy report, the coroner's jury investigating the mysterious death early today of A. Romeyne Pierson Jr., 42, wealthy Palm Beach and Glen Ridge, N. J., clubman, recessed tonight until tomorrow. Pierson was found dead on the floor of his bedroom at his estate, Manlatan, by a nurse who was summoned to his home by wife when he complained of illness. The nurse testified that Pierson, under the influence of liquor, had an altercation with his wife for an hour, but was persuaded to go to his own room. When he neared his bed, she said, Pierson stumbled and fell. Mrs. Pierson verified the nurse's statement.
