

REGARDING CALCRIM 600 - Att. Murder.

"It is an immediate step that puts the plan in motion so that the plan would have been completed if some circumstance had not interrupted that attempt."

IF the defendant had a plan and put it in motion but at the last instant changed his mind based on the immediate circumstances, does that constitute attempted murder?

Michael Dickson 10/29/13

Hi Mr. Dickson

I cannot answer this question. It is up to you to decide, based upon all of the evidence.

Ben
YMS

~~Ben~~

4:10pm