Ron Margiotta Believes In Neighborhood Schools That Provide Parents with the Highest Quality Educational Choices and Stability in Student Assignments.

A Foundation for Better Wake County Schools

Neighborhood Schools

Ron believes students benefit from attending schools in their communities. Our children need to spend more productive time in the classroom rather than spending hours each week being bused across the county. Ron supports magnet schools and believes that every school in the county must have the resources to insure each student has the opportunity to succeed. Neighborhood schools attract more volunteers and greater support while helping to build and enrich the fabric of our communities.

Parental Choice

Ron believes in empowering parents to make the best educational decisions for their children. In the recent past parents had little input into the choice of school assignments and calendar options for their children. Year after year they were moved around the county to suit the needs of the school system rather than the educational needs of the child. Today, as School Board Chairman, Ron has led the effort to restore parental choice as a guiding principle for Wake County Schools.

Stability in Assignments

Ron has worked to insure long-term stability and predictability in school assignments. The constant shuffling of students under the previous "diversity" policy caused much disruption yet proved to have no positive effect on academic success. In collaboration with Superintendent Tata, the Board is preparing to adopt a school assignment plan which embraces stability for our students and families.

Making the Right Decisions

In the face of opposition from the opponents of change, Ron Margiotta led the successful effort to go outside of the local bureaucracy and hire General Tony Tata, a nationally recognized educational leader to be Wake County's new School Superintendent.
